

Attorneys' Risks Under HIPAA and HITECH

Many attorneys handle sensitive patient data in the course of their law practices. Some attorneys qualify as "business associates" under HIPAA and HITECH; others need to be mindful of other federal and state requirements relating to patient data. If your firm is not well versed in HIPAA and HITECH compliance requirements, your level of risk may be on the rise with the Omnibus Rule going into effect September 23, 2013. The Rule may also impact your relationship with healthcare clients, who are relying on your obligations under your business associate agreements to comply with HIPAA and HITECH.

Please join Nelson Hardiman attorneys for a presentation focusing on attorneys' risks under HIPAA and HITECH and the impact of the upcoming change. You'll not only get a free education, but we'll also provide MCLE credit (1 hour ethics credit) and breakfast.
