The New Normal? Avoiding Risk and Preparing for Growing Scrutiny of Addiction Treatment

Recent weeks have brought headlines of law enforcement crackdowns on addiction treatment: federal, state, and local raids on sober living and residential rehab operators, arrests, and charges of fraud or other misconduct. National news also reflects a trend of growing federal and local law enforcement coordinating to prosecute fraud by laboratories, addiction treatment marketers, and others in the industry. Harry Nelson discusses whether this is the " new normal" in this article, and that addiction treatment center operators and professionals should be conscious of particular pitfalls and risk areas.

Read more