

Mental health services: How to get treatment if you can't afford it

Managing Partner, Harry Nelson, was quoted by NBC News regarding the rise of Tele-Mental Health resources.

"Tele-mental health in all forms has become a huge resource and there are great resources online offered by large health systems," says Harry Nelson, managing partner of Nelson Hardiman, head of the Behavioral Health Association of Providers and co-author of "From ObamaCare To TrumpCare: Why You Should Care." "The challenge there is that you need to be licensed in the state where the patient lives, but that said, we've seen a flourishing growth in treatment of all mental health by telemedicine and I expect it to grow exponentially." Reach out to your local hospital system to ask if they offer these services.
