Flattery, Identity Theft, Ethics and Behavioral Health

Harry Nelson was quoted in the article, "Flattery, Identity Theft, Ethics and Behavioral Health," published on Huffington Post on July 7, 2017:

"One positive notion is that ethics in behavioral health has been in the spotlight thanks to the procession of ugly legal cases concerning misleading marketing, urine drug testing fraud, and kickbacks being paid to patient brokers."